EMPLOYEE CASH/LIQUIDITY MANAGEMENT

Your main task as treasurer is to collect and invest money for your company. At the same time, you keep an eye on the associated risks and manage them. Depending on the size of your company, your responsibilities may also include controlling, collection and recovery, export financing and investor relations.

CONTROLLER

As a controller, you measure the profitability of your company. On this basis, you identify risks, weaknesses and potential for improvement in the company and develop - often in cooperation with specialist departments - solution concepts including alternatives. If these measures are implemented, you record and evaluate the progress and, if necessary, propose adjustment measures.

FINANCIAL DIRECTOR (CFO)

If you already have experience in finance and are looking for a management position, one possibility is the commercial management of a company. In this position, you will be responsible for overseeing the areas of finance, international accounting and controlling. In addition, you will be responsible for the entire accounting system. You will report to the management on current conditions, developments and planning of and all commercial consequences of current and future projects.

Description

Your studies in financial management will qualify you as an expert in the targeted management of business processes. You can then pursue a career in controlling or business management. And to gain even more cross-border expertise, you can choose to focus on German or Austrian private or company law.
